Roxbury, Nov. 7, 1866.

My Dear Friend:

No apology was needed from you for not having invited my son Wendell to accompany us to Weymouth, as you were right in supposing when you were here that he was in New York. As he expected to greet us here yesterday, and as I mentioned in my second letter that we would visit you on Thursday afternoon, (the day you named,) of this week, I knew you would feel not a little chagrined if he were left behind, because not specially invited. By your last letter, you wish me to specify a day for coming to Weymouth. I therefore infer that you will not expect us to-morrow. We propose, then, to defer our visit until Thursday afternoon of next week, taking the half past 2, P. M. train, and leaving Weymouth in the train that leaves Cohasset at 5.30, P. M.; inasmuch as Wendell will not be able to be with us until next Wednesday. Should you prefer either Friday or Saturday of next week to Thursday, you will let me know, and we will make our arrangements accordingly. If Thursday will be equally agreeable, you need not take the trouble to send a reply to this.

I am just going to the city, hoping to get letters from Fanny and Franky by the Java, arrived last evening.

Our household regards to all the dear ones in your pleasant home.

Yours, with the highest esteem,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

Miss Caroline Weston.
